Fair Trade stores have cropped up in many communities. Laura Mullen will speak to us on how this effort works to help distressed populations to improve their ability to earn a fair wage and provide for their families.

Laura has been managing the fair-trade store at 974 Monterey Street called HumanKind, a non-profit organization, providing artisan crafts from distressed countries around the world where art and products are produced by men and women in cottage industries.

Come and hear her experiences in the fair-trade non-profit industry in the humanitarian effort striving to provide fair income to downtrodden populations.
